

MARJORIE HANSEN SHAEVITZ
FOUNDER AND DIRECTOR, ADMISSION POSSIBLE

Marjorie Hansen Shaevitz is an award-winning author, speaker and Stanford-trained professional counselor who has one goal: to make sure every student has the best college admissions advice free of charge, regardless of their family background, financial resources, geographic location or attendance at a public or private school. In addition to helping thousands of students gain admission to colleges that best fit them, Marjorie has worked for the Dean of Students Office at Stanford University, was Orientation Officer for the East West Center at the University of Hawaii and directed the Re-Entry Program Adult Students at the University of California, San Diego. An active member of the National Association for College Admission Counseling, Hansen Shaevitz is a former member of the Stanford University National Parents Board and spent twelve years as a trustee for La Jolla Country Day School. Her best-selling books include The Confident Women and The Superwoman Syndrome. She has appeared on many national radio and television programs, including The Oprah Winfrey Show and the original David Letterman Show and has been quoted as an expert in newspapers including the Wall Street Journal, New York Times and USA Today. Marjorie is a parent of two children and two stepchildren whom she guided through the admissions process.
